Welcome! ? i :mot tə t k^w ənome...it's good to see you! Klahoose Wilderness Resort is a premier Indigenous cultural experience on the lands of the toq qaymx^w (Klahoose) People. The award winning resort is 100% Indigenous owned by the Klahoose First Nation.

We are an all-inclusive eco-resort in the British Columbia coastal wilderness of Desolation Sound. A resort that reflects the Klahoose traditional values and offers an immersive exploration into this pristine region rich in diverse wilderness, and cultural significance. Toba Inlet wildlife tours include spring bear viewing and late summer/fall grizzly bear salmon run tours led by Indigenous guides.

Only accessible by boat or seaplane, the resort is about 150 miles north of Vancouver, is off-the-grid and located within the heart of Desolation Sound. Klahoose Wilderness Resort resides upon Homfray Channel between the Coast Mountain peaks of British Columbia's Sunshine Coast and the Salish Sea and the edge of BC's Great Bear Rainforest. The adventure begins with an included arrival boat transfer from Lund, B.C., airport pick-up at Powell River or by seaplane direct to our dock.

The ancient voices echoed in the traditional Klahoose greeting welcome newly arrived guests with a casual gathering on the lodge verandah. The unparalleled visit is about to begin. One deep breath of the pure, energizing forest air has life's worries vanishing instantly. Senses suddenly awaken upon hearing the distant call of a majestic eagle as it soars above a pod of nearby Orca's, whose distinct dorsal fins break the water's calm surface.

You are ready to embrace the natural and the supernatural spirits of this land and its People. You are ready to "Answer the Call".

Open seasonally from May 9 to October 23, 2024

The spectacular Lodge at Klahoose Wilderness Resort provides an intimate environment and impressive space to relax.

A 6,100-square foot timber structure hewn of local cedar. Four spacious guest rooms, perfect for couples in the main lodge and three separate cedar one and two bedroom cabins can accommodate up to 5 guests in each. Stays at the resort are, on average, for 14 guests (double occupancy), and up to 22 if guests are sharing rooms and cabins. Each guest room and cabin is tastefully decorated with Indigenous artwork from surrounding coastal communities and public space conveys breathtakingly beautiful vistas of Desolation Sound. Guests come together for morning coffee and after another exceptional day, gather again for evening cocktails from the wraparound deck as the setting sun illuminates the Homfray Channel.

Every morning in Desolation Sound an astounding diversity of wildlife awakens to forage, nest, and explore their pristine habitat. For a precious few days from mid-August to mid-October guests are invited within this sublime environment to observe grizzlies fishing for salmon. They can paddle among the Northern Islands, and gather wisdom from the Klahoose culture.

From yesterday to today

ʔi:mot tətʰ kwənome...it's good to see you!

Welcome to the traditional Klahoose Nation territory, which extends from Toba Inlet in Desolation Sound and the Northern islands of the Strait of Georgia on Coastal British Columbia. Our Nation's permanent community resides in Squirrel Cove, on Cortes Island, BC.

The Klahoose Nation has lived since time before memory on lands, waters, and air that make up their abundant territories. A place where our ancestors' spirit soars and can be heard in the wind as it rustles the treetops and guides our people.

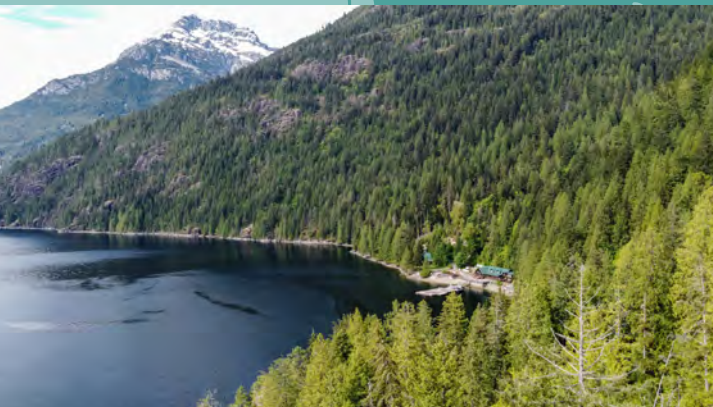

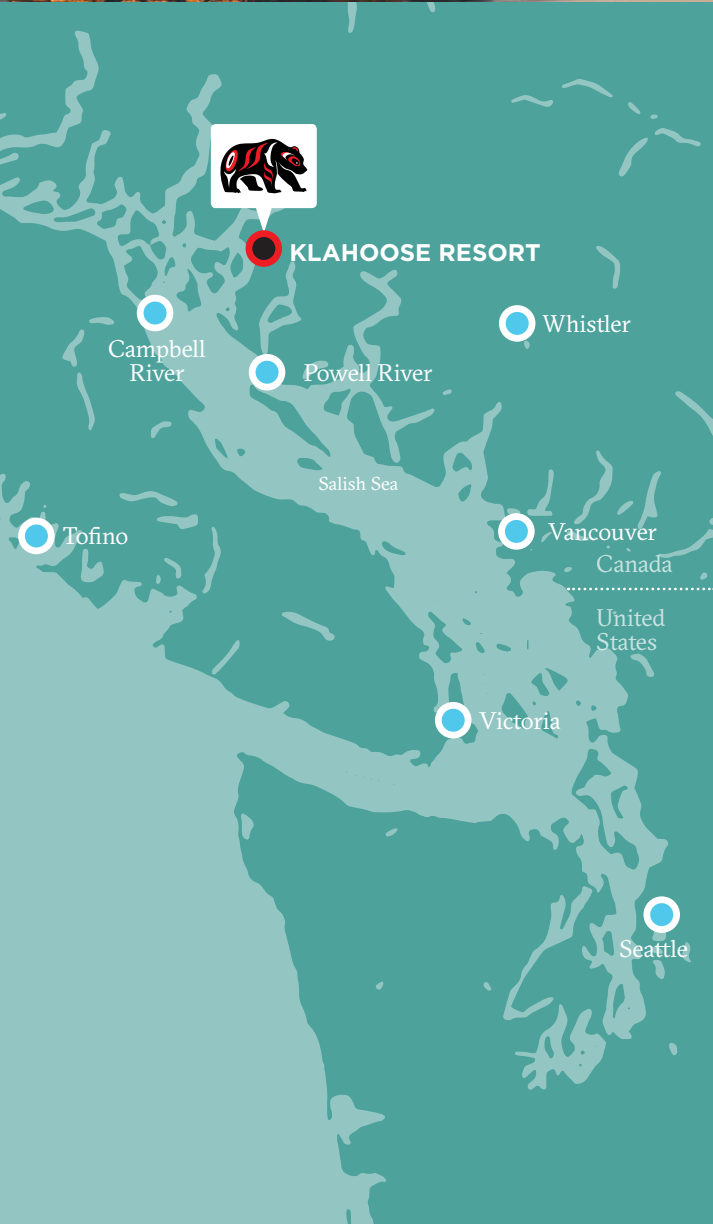

The Klahoose Elders remember vividly a time when their Big Houses stood on the shores of Toba Inlet. Today, most of our population lives in the main village in Squirrel Cove on the East shores of Cortes Island. Members of our nation also reside in the coastal communities of Powell River, Campbell River, Vancouver's Lower Mainland and Washington state.

Years of restrictive legislation forbid practicing most Klahoose cultural traditions which has significantly impacted our Nation. To combat this cultural loss, the Klahoose has embarked on a journey to rejuvenate its traditions, language, and identity. We are hopeful and delighted to see our youth's eagerness to reconnect the threads of their past to the framework of modern life.

The Klahoose Wilderness Resort's visitors to our territory strengthen our opportunities while supporting our efforts. By visiting, you're helping build a more inclusive future for all. On behalf of the Klahoose Council and membership, we extend a warm welcome and much gratitude.

We wish you safe travels and hope you enjoy your time with us.

How to Get Here

ACCESSIBLE REMOTE WILDERNESS

BY AIR

Located deep within the heart of the remote Desolation Sound biosphere, Klahoose Wilderness Resort is remarkably accessible. Several flight options are available. Scheduled flights with Pacific Coastal Airlines departs from Vancouver's South Terminal to Powell River or Campbell River (Vancouver Island) only takes 35 minutes.

Harbour Air Seaplanes scheduled flight from Vancouver Harbour to Powell River is a second option.

Powell River Airport pick-up can be pre-arranged for a one hour road transfer to the coastal town of Lund. Upon arrival to Lund Harbour guests are greeted by their local host and take a scenic one hour covered boat transfer to the Klahoose Wilderness Resort.

BY LAND

The drive from Vancouver to Lund is considered one of the most spectacular car journeys in North America. The route includes two ferry crossings with plenty of additional sightseeing options along the way. The total journey time is typically 5-6 hours with several picturesque villages en route.

The 40-minute crossing from Horseshoe Bay to Langdale captures the magnificent scenery of Howe Sound and the B.C. Lower Mainland. A beautiful 90-minute drive from Langdale can include detours to the coastal village of Gibson and ends in Earls Cove where the Saltery Bay Ferry conveys passengers for 50 minutes across still more sublime scenery. The final one-hour drive to Lund passes through historic and now booming coastal town of Powell River.

On Vancouver Island, BC Ferries regularly depart Comox for Powell River.

Environmental Stewardship

The Klahoose Nation is rich in land, water, and cultural resources.

The Klahoose ancestors have managed this legacy of natural resources, honoring and protecting the environment and its inhabitants for millennia.

True to their legacy, both operators are fully committed to continue protecting the environment, its wildlife, and natural resources for all future generations.

Their investment is committed to the preservation, conservation, and protection of our ocean, wilderness, marine, and terrestrial life as well as the local community.

- Partnership with the Commercial Bear Viewing Association and the North Island Marine Mammal Stewardship Association to develop industry standards, uniform guide training, and ongoing research to protect oceans and wildlife habitat
- Contribution to the local economy to support regional coastal communities by purchasing locally-sourced goods and food, hiring local and Indigenous staff, and supporting artists
- Clean energy hydro system eliminates about 38 tons of carbon emissions with its own power supply
- We are working on a comprehensive assessment to achieve Sustainable Tourism Certification. The process includes a one-on-one review of our business practices with an assessor to see how we're doing against GreenStep's Sustainable Tourism criteria, which is Global Sustainable Tourism Council –Recognized.
- Klahoose Wilderness Resort has signed the Sustainable Tourism 2030 Pledge, to demonstrate our commitment to improving the sustainability performance of our business between now and 2030.

Guests who choose to visit Klahoose Wilderness Resort will naturally support these great initiatives while etching memories through their personal adventures. This collective effort, a connection to place, its people, and time-gathered wisdom come together at Klahoose Wilderness Resort within the Klahoose Nation to cast lifelong memories while providing a positive impact for us all.
